Emergency Physicians®

American College of Emergency Physicians

Founded in 1968, the American College of Emergency Physicians (ACEP) is the largest emergency medicine association in the U.S. and the world. Today, the College represents more than 22,000 emergency physicians, and is the emergency medicine specialty society recognized by organized medicine. ACEP exists to support quality emergency medical care, and to promote the interests of emergency physicians. The College promotes the highest standards of patient care through its advocacy and leadership efforts at both the state and federal levels. ACEP provides its members with information and education about today's ever-changing health care environment and the challenging practice of emergency medicine by providing a spectrum of educational conferences and publications, and through highly active representation in the nation's capital.

National Safety Council

The National Safety Council, founded in 1913 and chartered by the United States Congress in 1953, is the nation's leading advocate for safety and health. The Council's mission is "to educate and influence society to adopt safety, health and environmental policies, practices and procedures that prevent and mitigate human suffering and economic losses arising from preventable causes."

The National Safety Council has been working for generations to protect lives and promote health with innovative programs. The Council is a nonprofit, non-governmental, international public service organization dedicated to improving the safety, health and environmental well-being of all people.
